Dell Children's Medical Group (DCMG),
in conjunction with Dell Children's Medical Center of Central Texas (DCMCCT), is seeking an outstanding individual to join the Section of:

Pediatric Allergy, Asthma, and Immunology

This full-time position is focused on clinical allergy and immunology, with the opportunity to manage complex immunodeficiency. The ideal candidate would have specific training, interest, and expertise in immunodeficiency include transplant immunology. Our section provides a wide range of allergy and immunology services, including IVIg/infusions, biologic treatments, allergy testing, immunotherapy, food and drug challenges, and inpatient consultation services at Dell Children's Medical Center of Central Texas. In addition to clinical responsibilities, there is an opportunity to participate in the education of medical students and residents through faculty appointment at Dell Medical School at University of Texas. If a candidate is an established investigator, there is an opportunity to discuss protected research time through Dell Medical School.

Collaboration with medical and adjunct specialties will be encouraged to allow for the pursuit of innovative program development and clinical research initiatives. DCMCCT, a member of the Seton Healthcare Family, is a 248-bed children's hospital serving 46-counties. As the only freestanding pediatric facility in the region with a Level I pediatric trauma center, Level IV epilepsy center and Level IV neonatal intensive care unit, DCMCCT's mission is to be a center of excellence for children's health with a strong alliance of expert personnel, facilities and other specialty resources. We are dedicated to the care of children and adolescents throughout Central Texas. Austin has been designated by US News & World Report as one of the top ten "Best Places to Live" for several years. This growing metropolis is considered "the live music capital of the world," a high-tech growth hub, and home to one of the largest state universities in the country. Seton Healthcare Family is a member of Ascension Health, the nation's largest non-profit health system.

The Seton Healthcare Family is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action/Equal Access Employer. Hiring is contingent upon obtaining medical licensure in the state of Texas. Candidate must be board certified in Pediatrics and board eligible or certified in Allergy and Immunology.
