Northwest Asthma & Allergy Center is offering a job opportunity in the Seattle area for a Board Certified/Eligible physician in Allergy/Immunology. The new associate would be eligible for partnership at the end of the first year. We are the largest private allergy practice serving Washington state for over 50 years. We have seven offices maintained by 11 physician partners.

Although we are an independent practice, we are dedicated to academic teaching and research. Our physicians have clinical appointments at the University of Washington (UW) and are on staff at local hospitals, including Seattle Children’s Hospital. The UW Allergy fellows routinely rotate through our clinics as an integral part of their pediatric and adult allergy training. Furthermore, we are active in informing our allergy/immunology colleagues on the latest research through the UW Allergy Teaching Series which is streamed online.

Our physicians also serve as the board for Seattle Allergy & Asthma Research Institute (SAARI) -- a non-profit clinical research corporation. Since 1972, the center has conducted over 500 FDA approved clinical trials including several NIH protocols. This company focuses on testing experimental treatments for food allergies, asthma and other allergic diseases. SAARI is also a founding member of the Seattle Food Allergy Consortium -- a collaboration with several local academic centers whose vision is finding a cure for food allergy through basic and clinical research. Northwest Asthma & Allergy Center has also been designated a FARE Center of Excellence.

Besides our exciting clinical work, Seattle and its suburbs offers myriad recreational and cultural opportunities. It is already the hub of many Fortune 500 companies and is continuing to grow rapidly and attract many talents globally. Within a short drive, one can also make a quick escape into nature and explore our hiking and biking trails, ski, golf or enjoy Puget Sound and multiple lakes.

Interested candidates may submit their CV with cover letter to me via email apark@nwasthma.com.